

200 YEARS
IN THE MAKING

Official Legacy Project of the Indiana Bicentennial Commission

Indiana sits, as its motto claims, at “the Crossroads of America.” It borders Lake Michigan and the state of Michigan to the north, Ohio to the east, Kentucky to the south, and Illinois to the west, making it an integral part of the American Midwest. Except for Hawaii, Indiana is the smallest state west of the Appalachian Mountains. After the American Revolution the lands of Indiana were open to U.S. settlers. The influx of white immigrants brought increased war with the Native American tribes. The conflicts continued until the 1811 Battle of Tippecanoe, which was won by General, and future president, William Henry Harrison. With a name that is generally thought to mean “land of the Indians,” Indiana was admitted on Dec. 11, 1816, as the 19th state of the union. Its capital has been at Indianapolis since 1825.

Indiana’s 2016 Bicentennial celebration aims to honor our state’s 200 years of history, and to do so in a modern way that engages all 6.5 million Hoosiers and leaves a lasting legacy for future generations.

Transportation has always been an important part of the history of the state of Indiana and Indiana’s seven historical and scenic byways continue to help remind travelers of the roads used in the past. This passport will help guide you on an Indiana road trip—200 hundred years in the making.

The Indiana Byway Program is designed to preserve, protect, enhance and recognize transportation corridors of unique character. These corridors are notable examples of our nation’s beauty, history, culture and recreational experience. Some byway routes are designated nationally while others are state designated byways. The national designation is made by the U.S. Secretary of Transportation from nominations presented by the states and federal land management agencies.

NATIONAL ROAD

www.indiananationalroad.org

The Historic National Road was the very first U.S. Federal road. The road was originally conceived by George Washington, and later officially designated in 1806 by Thomas Jefferson. The National Road facilitated the largest land migration in U.S. history as people moved West searching for opportunity in western territories opened for settlement. The Indiana portion of the Historic National Road runs from Richmond on the Eastern edge of the state to Terre Haute in the West, with Indianapolis located directly in the center. The Indiana Historic National Road was first named a State Scenic Byway in 1996. The entire National Road was recognized as a National Scenic Byway in 1998 and an All-American Road in 2002.

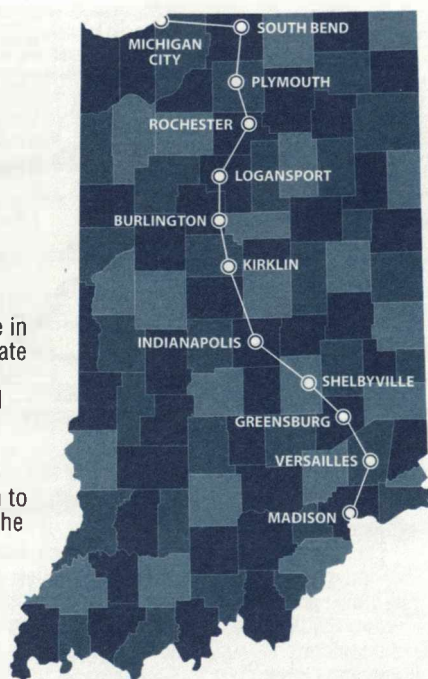

MICHIGAN ROAD

historicmichiganroad.org

The Michigan Road was probably the most important transportation route in the fledgling state of Indiana. Being the first road commissioned by the Indiana State Legislature in 1826, the road became a key thoroughfare in opening the state to settlement north of Indianapolis. The road was surveyed in 1829 and constructed through the early 1830s. The road established ports at each end of the state by connecting the then-largest city, Madison on the Ohio River, to a new port named Michigan City on Lake Michigan via the new state capital at Indianapolis. It was used by the pioneer, as a path to freedom by the runaway slave, and as the trail down which the Native American was removed from their lands.

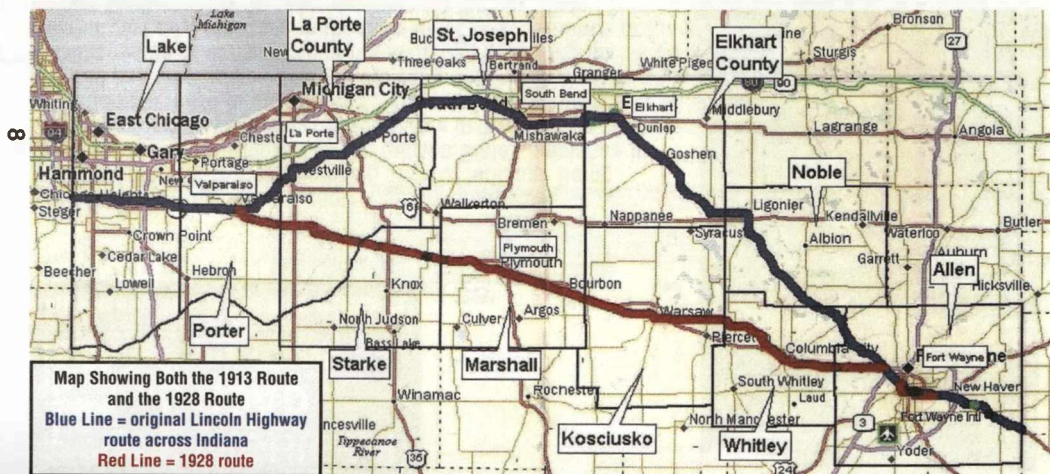

LINCOLN HIGHWAY

indianalincolnhighway.org

Designated as a Scenic Byway in 2011, the Indiana Lincoln Highway Byway is part of the Lincoln Highway, the nation's first transcontinental highway formed in 1913, which runs from New York City to San Francisco. The original alignment goes through Fort Wayne, Ligonier, Elkhart, South Bend, La Porte, Valparaiso, Merrillville and Dyer. The shortened 1928 alignment goes from Fort Wayne to Valparaiso through Columbia City, Warsaw, and Plymouth.

OHIO RIVER
SCENIC BYWAY

OHIO RIVER SCENIC BYWAY

ohioriverbyway.com

Designated as an Indiana Byway in 1992, the Ohio River Scenic Byway is 302 miles in Southern Indiana from the Ohio border at Lawrenceburg to the Illinois border west of Evansville. It passes through historic towns such as Vevay, Madison, Corydon and Newburgh. The center of the Byway is anchored by the Falls Cities area of New Albany and Jeffersonville. The Byway is a "Corridor of Adventure" with spectacular scenery along the way.

INDIANA'S HISTORIC PATHWAYS pg 24-27

www.usi.edu/ihp/index.aspx

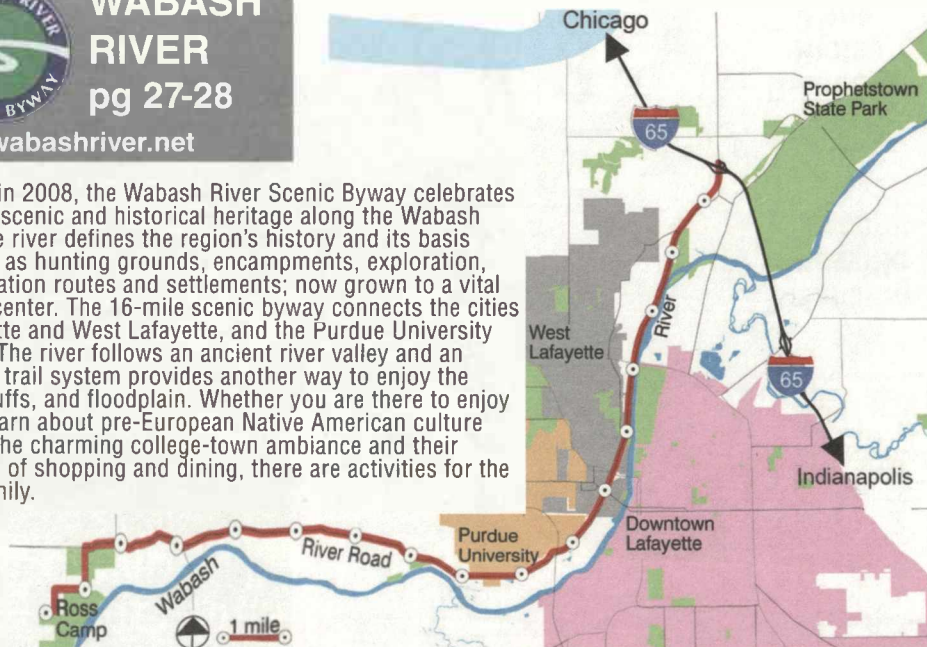

Indiana's Historic Pathways include three separate but closely interrelated corridors: US 50, US 150 and the Buffalo Trace. Each has profoundly influenced the people and communities through which they pass. Together they represent the region's varied land forms, its wealth of natural resources, its small and distinctive communities, and its role in national transportation and commerce. Indiana's Historic Pathways tells its distinctive story to residents and visitors.

wabashriver.net

Founded in 2008, the Wabash River Scenic Byway celebrates Indiana's scenic and historical heritage along the Wabash River. The river defines the region's history and its basis over time as hunting grounds, encampments, exploration, transportation routes and settlements; now grown to a vital regional center. The 16-mile scenic byway connects the cities of Lafayette and West Lafayette, and the Purdue University campus. The river follows an ancient river valley and an extensive trail system provides another way to enjoy the views, bluffs, and floodplain. Whether you are there to enjoy nature, learn about pre-European Native American culture or enjoy the charming college-town ambiance and their collection of shopping and dining, there are activities for the whole family.

Canal

Scenic Byway

WHITEWATER CANAL

whitewatercanalscenicbyway.org

In 2008 the State of Indiana designated a driving route through southeast Indiana and southwest Ohio (as developed by the WCBA) as an official scenic byway. The route runs through Wayne, Fayette, Union, Franklin and Dearborn counties in Indiana. Its three auxiliary loops also encompass Ripley County in Indiana and Hamilton County in Ohio. The Byways Canal Route mirrors the settlement of the Whitewater River Valley beginning on the Ohio River in Lawrenceburg and winding north to Hagerstown. More than a single route, this byway has a bonus with three additional driving loops to help you discover the richness of the entire valley, not just the historic canal route. The Whitewater Canal Scenic Byway Association is a federally-approved, 501(3)c organization. Its main mission is the advancement of the Whitewater Valley through educating the public of this region's history, culture, art and attractions.
